Enter the number we see on the back of your license plate. If you do not have your product key, you can obtain the information online by entering your product key number in the License Key field. Your Microsoft product key is for your personal use, or for use by a single end-user if the serial number you entered is for use by a company or corporation. A serial number is not required for a personal user to upgrade to another license. There are two types of Visual Studio licenses: 1) Personal licenses that are for 1 user only. 2) Company or Corporation licenses for multiple users. You do not have to purchase a license for each user who wants to use the software. The serial number can be purchased by your corporation or by your local Microsoft reseller. Some users purchase the product key for a Microsoft reseller in their area, and it is the Microsoft reseller who distributes the license to the end users. Please note that if you purchase a Visual Studio license for a Microsoft reseller, they will receive the name and address of the person who will own the license, and will return that information to you, which will allow you to renew the license if that person dies or moves. You must be the original end-user of the software to purchase a license for 1 user. To use the software after the trial expires, the license expires, and you must purchase the software.
